Hannes Kühnle received a bachelor and master degree from Graz University of Technology, Austria (ICTM, Prof. Dr. Martin Wilkening). During this time in Austria, he had the chance to participate in a summer school program at the University of Novi Sad, Serbia (Faculty of Sciences, Department of Chemistry). He also took part in the Erasmus Program (European Union student exchange program) as an exchange student at University of Gent, Belgium (Faculty of Bioscience and Engineering). In 2018, he became a research assistant at the Chair of Aging Processes by Prof. Dr. Egbert Figgemeier (ISEA, RWTH Aachen, Germany).

The current research focus is on lithium metal depositions in lithium metal batteries.
